

The European construction leads to peace and welfare on the European continent. In 1995 (50 countries, 90 stamps) it was time to celebrate the 50 years of the end of World War II. The Europa stamps celebrate it through the peace and freedom theme. Russia took part for the first time that year, but also Bosnia and Herzegovina. What a symbol for a country who suffered so much of the war during the 90's.

Frimærket i dette hæfte er udgivet den 4. maj 1995. Det er ét af i alt fire mærker i en serie udgivet i anledning af 50-års dagen for Danmarks befrielse efter 2. verdenskrig.

Frimærket viser feltmarskal Montgomery på Rådhuspladsen og er ligesom de øvrige frimærker i serien - befrielsen fra koncentrationslejrene - de hvide busser, modstandsbevægelsen - faldskærmsnedkastning og jødernes flugt over sundet - tegnet af grafiker Jakob Kühnel efter fotos af Erik Petersen, J. Holm, Frihedsmuseets foto og M. Margolinsky.

Trykt i offset af Postens Frimærkecenter.

...to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war, which twice in our lifetime has brought untold sorrow to mankind, and to reaffirm faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small, and to establish conditions under which justice and respect for the obligations arising from treaties and other sources of international law can be maintained, and to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom...

THESE WERE THE AIMS, expressed in the United Nations Charter, of the 51 countries which formed the UN on 24 October 1945 following the devastation of the Second World War which claimed more than 30 million lives.

The UN evolved from a plan for peace, known as the Atlantic Charter, announced by President Roosevelt and Winston Churchill on 14 August 1941. Brought together in adversity, 26 allied states—described as the 'United Nations'—accepted this in the Washington Declaration of January 1942. By 1944, plans for a United Nations organization were well advanced. The following year was to prove momentous. After six dark years, hostilities ended—VE-Day was celebrated on 8 May and VJ-Day on 15 August—and the foundations for rebuilding peace were laid when the UN was officially born in October.

pivotal role in all international disarmament treaties concluded since 1945. And it has made considerable efforts to redress abuses of freedom, so often the seedbeds of conflict. Its Universal Declaration of Human Rights enunciates the basic freedoms to which all people are entitled and is augmented by major conventions on specific issues, including women's rights, racial discrimination and the rights of children.

10 PRACTICE TOLERANCE

and LIVE TOGETHER in PEACE

Today, the voluntary association of states that is the UN has grown to 184 – dedicated through signature of the UN Charter to maintain international peace and solve problems through co-operation. Peace and freedom are paramount to the UN's existence. But the battle for these ideals is ceaseless, as recent events in the former Yugoslavia and elsewhere painfully emphasise. Despite Aristotle's assertion that 'we make war to live in peace', the reality is that all wars, whatever the cause, reflect human failure. Waging peace is more noble, but more difficult. While it is easy to criticise UN peace-keeping efforts, it has to be remembered that the conflicts which defy reconciliation are the ones to make news headlines. Largely forgotten are those conflicts where the UN has succeeded in restoring peace and democracy.

Blue-helmeted peace-keepers, however, represent just one facet of the UN. Equally significant is its work to eradicate the causes of war. For example, the UN has played a

The UN Environment Programme (UNEP) has been the driving force behind international treaties, such as the 1987 Montreal Protocol on substances that deplete the ozone layer. The elimination of poverty also merits the UN's highest priority. This includes UN Children's Fund (UNICEF) assistance in health care, nutrition and education in more than 100 countries.

Peace and freedom are all too often taken for granted. As we commemorate the end of the Second World War, we need to remind ourselves of the courage and sacrifice of all those whose efforts helped to bring this terrible conflict to an end. Their ultimate victory was to secure peace and freedom and an opportunity for nations to join together in co-operation. Their selfless example should serve to make us realise that, without the existence of the UN over the last five decades, we would now live in an unimaginably more dangerous, self-interested world.

"Love, Peace and Labour" is the name of a relief in the ABF building in Stockholm made by Bror Hjorth in 1965. The large wooden relief was made as a diptych, a picture in two parts, because the wall it was made for was partly blocked by a column.

Bror Hjorth (1894-1968) is one of the most important Swedish artists of the 20th century. He studied in Paris, tried cubism, but was mainly influenced by Swedish and foreign folk art.

While Bror Hjorth was contemplating his assignment for the ABF building he happened to read a few lines by the American poet Walt Whitman (1819-1892). The relief is a faithful illustration of the lines from the poem read from left to right. An ageing Whitman holds up a sheet with the lines of the poem. Jesus is in yellow with his arms held out. In front of him is Socrates. They are the masters, the good, constructive forces.

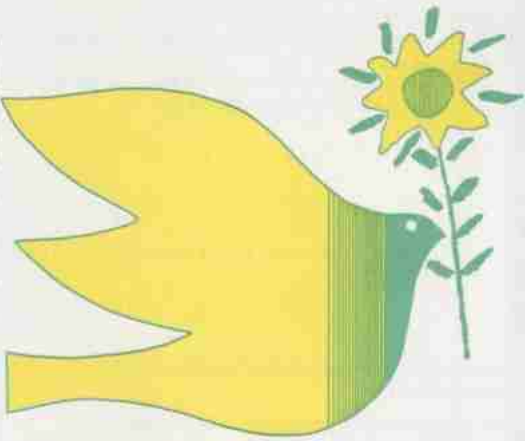

He started on the relief in 1961. That year the Prime Minister of the new nation of Congo, Patrice Lumumba, was murdered. Bror Hjorth brought the murder to the fore by putting a portrait of Lumumba on the right side of the relief with the same pose as Jesus, but supported by Albert Schweitzer, a Nobel Peace Prize Laureate.

Bror Hjorth said, "I can only paint what I love". In his relief he demonstrates that love between people creates peace, a necessity for improving our living conditions.

Berømte kvinder

Frimærket i dette hæfte er udgivet den 9. maj 1996. Det er det ene af årets to EUROPA-frimærker over temaet "berømte kvinder".

Asta Nielsen (1881-1972), som ses på frimærket, var en af filmhistoriens største stumfilmstjerner.

Det andet EUROPA-frimærke viser forfatteren

Karen Blixen (1885-1962).

Grafikeren Austin Grandjean har stået for kompositionen af frimærkerne.

Trykt i offset af Post Danmark, Frimærker & Filateli.

Karin Kock (1891-1976) was one of the most prominent women in Sweden in the 20th century. She made important contributions and reached top positions in the fields of science, politics, and administration. Karin Kock was a Professor of Economics and in 1947 she became the first woman member of the government and the following year Minister of Domestic Economy. Three years later she became the Director of the Central Bureau of Statistics.

Karin Kock started out as a Liberal, but in the early 1930s she turned to the Social Democrats. She had important posts in the women's movement.

Astrid Lindgren, born 1907, is the most read and perhaps the best-loved of Swedish writers. Her works have been translated into some sixty languages.

Generations of children have grown up with Pippi Longstocking, who made her debut in 1945. Then followed Bill Bergson Master Detective, Karlson on the Roof and Six Bullerby Children. In the 1960s we got new and exciting companions: The Emil books, The Brothers Lionheart, and Ronia the Robber's Daughter. The province of Småland plays an important part in Astrid Lindgren's writing, but she also takes us to places where only imagination and poetry can enter: Farawayland, Nangiylala, and Matt's Forest.

LES TRAVAILLEURS DE LA MER

Hugo's own drawing of the sea monster, The King of the Antilliers

The Toilers of the Sea is a thrilling story of human ardour, wild nature and legendary monsters. Set in Guernsey, it came from the pen of Victor Hugo, the man who wrote Les Misérables and The Hunchback of Notre Dame.

Les Travailliers de la Mer est une histoire passionnante qui relate l'arsueur des hommes, qui décrit la nature sauvage et qui parle de monstres issus de légendes. L'action se déroule à Guernsey. Cet ouvrage a été écrit par Victor Hugo, l'auteur des Misérables et de Notre Dame de Paris.

The fairies were thought to like and sport in the elder trees. There wasn't a house or farm that did not have its 'traminan' tree planted by the door or in the garden 'for the fairies'. It grieves the fairies if even a branch is cut down.

... Ghiocelul apără pe coasta dealului.
Năpraznicul Crivăț se repezi să-l nimicească pe îndrăznețul ce-i călcase recea împărăție...
Dragălașa zână Primăvara îi veni în ajutor, dar fu rănită. Sângele roșu și fierbinte de crăiasă picură peste aibul petalelor lui Ghiocel, readucându-l la viață.

(Legenda Mărțisorului)

Asediați, moldovenii se stingeau de foame și sete. Și ar fi cazut cetatea...
S-a apucat tot neamul cocostărcilor să le care struguri. Ospătându-se, moldovenii au prins la puteri și i-au
gonit pe tătari.

(Legenda Cocostărcului)

Iar Manoli sta,
Ș-așteptă cuvântă:
"O, soaptă de auz
Aievea mi-a spus
Că orice-am lucra
Noaptea s-a surpa

Pân-om hotări
În zid de-a zidi
Cea-năl soțioară,
Cea-năl soțioară
Gare-s-a ivi
Mâni în zori de zi..."

Iar bietul Manoli,
Când se încerca
De-a se arunca
Iată c-auzea
Din zid că ieșea
Un glas nădusit.

Un glas mult iubit...
Cum o auzea,
Manea se perdea
De pe coșeris,
Mort bietul cădea!

STORIES AND LEGENDS

Owing to Vuk Stefanovic Karadzic, a great language reformer and a recorder of folk literature, a friend of Goethe and brothers Grimm, Serbian national treasure became familiar to European nations and was extraordinarily appreciated. "Baš Čelik" is a typical fairy tale, with the atmosphere close to European creativity (palaces, nobility, knighthood) and folk fiction know in other sorts of literature as a plants, dragons, underground, water and flying creatures.

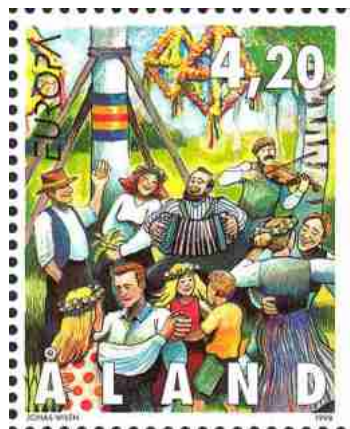

In 1998 (59 countries, 102 stamps) we have festivals and national celebrations as common theme. Azerbaijan and Georgia took part that year for the first time as well as Belarus but for the first time with a legal issue.

WEST SHOW

Held out on the west coast at L'Erée in what is generally regarded as the most rustic and least-changed part of Guernsey, the West Show is a fascinating combination of past and present. Along with the traditional crafts, old-fashioned costumes and animals comes a funfair, making this an enjoyable day out for the whole family.

NORTH SHOW

The climax of this popular country show held in Saumarez Park is the famous Battle of Flowers, for which families and groups of friends build moving floats on a theme of their choice and decorate them with flowers. Originally the "battle" came after the judging when revellers would rip the blooms off and pelt one another with them. Nowadays the floats stay untouched to delight visitors for weeks afterwards.

LIBERATION DAY

More than 50 years after Guernsey was freed from occupying German forces, we still celebrate the liberation with a Bank Holiday. The festivities are centred around a huge funfair, procession and street party in St. Peter Port, and HRH the Prince of Wales joined us for the 50th anniversary, unveiling the Liberation Monument (seen here prior to the ceremony, shrouded in a Guernsey flag).

*'This bread I break was once the oat...
Man in the day or wind at night laid the crops low, broke the grope's joy.'*

BYLAN THOMSE THIS BREAD I BREAK

The revolutionary New Husbandry, 1731, established the basis of modern agriculture. Written by Jethro Tull, even the more cooperative landowners came to accept his innovative farming techniques.

Wheat and barley are the two major crops grown in Britain today, accounting for more than 80 per cent of production each year.

From the late eighteenth century the development and refinement of livestock became a fashionable pursuit. The Berkshire pig did not escape this trend, and today this rare breed probably owes a great deal to its Chinese and Neapolitan cousins.

From the Domesday Book we know that the hundred or so villagers of Loxton, Nottinghamshire, farmed an area of 720 acres of fields divided into narrow parallel strips. Uniquely, Loxton has preserved this strip system (although today's fields are larger than in medieval times). The economic and social life of the Norman village was governed by the seasonal work on the land – such as harvesting, ploughing and sowing. Communities set out to work the fields which belonged to the landlord, or were rented to the villagers in return for their labour.

Medieval agricultural practices were not static.

Oxen were slowly replaced by more adaptable horses for ploughing. The area of land under the plough was increased by clearing woodland, permitting a doubling of the English population between 1180 and 1330 to more than five million. From now until the fifteenth century, wool from vast flocks of sheep brought huge wealth to some parts of the country.

The productivity of the land did not rise significantly until the eighteenth century. One of the most crucial changes was the introduction of the machine. Invented in 1701 by Jethro Tull (1674–1741), a Berkshire landowner, the seed drill sowed seeds individually in rows – replacing the wasteful practice of scattering by hand, and allowing for efficient weeding. Encouraging change was the continued growth and integration of the market economy as transport links improved and population growth fostered demand, as with the spread of the potato. Introduced into Britain from South America, the potato, initially grown for its medicinal properties in the sixteenth century, had become a common food by the end of the eighteenth. In some places it fed the newly emerging urban workforce. Other new foods, and new sources of produce, were changing people's diet. By the nineteenth century our growing cities were fed by North American grain, Argentine beef, Australasian mutton and Danish bacon. Bad domestic harvests and these imports contributed to a severe and sustained agricultural depression from the 1870s. The rural labour force fell, as did the area under agriculture.

In the last century agriculture has continued to grow, while the role of technology has grown. Inventor Dan Albion perfected the world's first petrol-driven light tractor in 1902. The cumbersome steam-powered tractors were consigned to history, and productivity boomed. The two World Wars demonstrated the nation's need to feed itself, but peacetime competition continued to have a major impact. The earlier patchwork of small fields surrounded by dense hedges was increasingly replaced by large expanses of arable land, often bounded by fences. There are now fewer trees and hedges in farmed lowland areas and, consequently, fewer species of birds and mammals. Since the War the use of synthetic pesticides and fertilizers boomed, creating concern on the part of both farmers and the public. Satellite and computer technology are playing an increasing role here: data from satellites observing fields can be used with information from equipment on the tractor or combine harvester that measures the yield from each part of the field. Areas where crops are flourishing or failing can be pinpointed and action taken.

Farmers and farming increasingly share the countryside with other interests and activities, but they continue to be key to the nation's economy and identity. The Farmers' Tale is a millennia-old one of our relationship to the land and the environment.

Medieval life rarely rose above subsistence level – a never-ending cycle of toil to produce corn for bread, barley for ale, sheep for wool, goats for milk and pigs for meat.

Modern satellite technology enables farmers to limit the use of chemical fertilisers and pesticides, reducing the environmental impact.

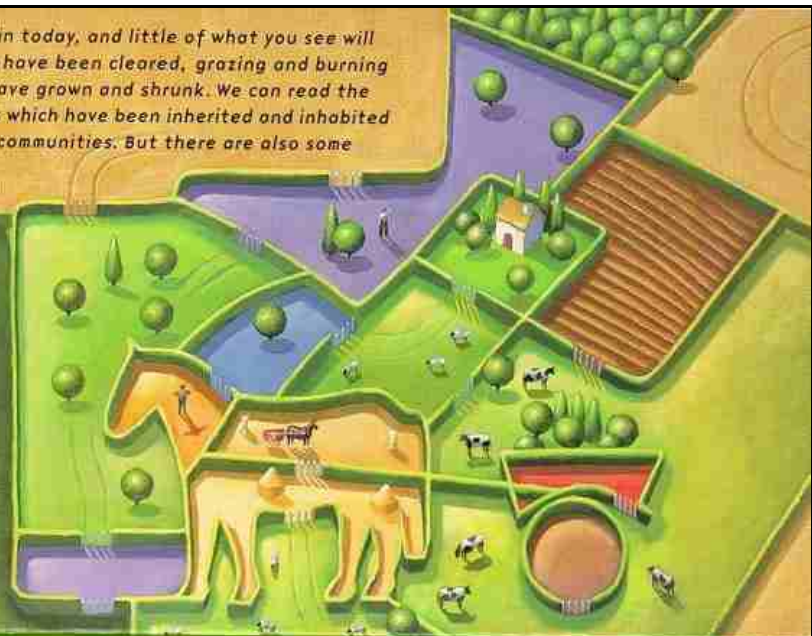

Tractors have made possible huge advances in agricultural technology, with modern machines having the pulling power of 100 rare horses.

Take a journey anywhere in rural Britain today, and little of what you see will be the 'natural' environment. Forests have been cleared, grazing and burning have maintained moorlands, villages have grown and shrunk. We can read the history in the landscapes and buildings which have been inherited and inhabited by successive generations of farming communities. But there are also some written sources of information.

The Domesday Book of 1086 is a landmark in Britain's history. Ordered by William the Conqueror, it required people to be celled together to declare the state of their communities, their numbers and possessions, from poultry to pigs to ploughs. The many small reals of England were ordered and inscribed on vellum: a nation was described. We read that most of the population was involved in agriculture; most people lived in villages. In times of modern efficiency (and even over-production), it is easy to forget how hard it was, for most of our history, to feed everyone: when harvests failed, many went hungry.

Hellier

Hellier is an island with Guernsey's east coast. 4.5 metres wide by boat, but one and a half miles long and half a mile wide, the landscape ranges from cliffs to a flat, sandy coastline with several beautiful beaches.

This is a place that offers respite from the hectic pace of modern life.

Holidaymakers lucky enough to spend a week or two here can't help but relax in such a gentle atmosphere, where days are spent walking, swimming, reading or just thinking.

Even Guernsey people, with their own peaceful island to enjoy, can be found in Hellier during the summer, taking a break from reality and dropping down a gear.

The larger part of the stamp design features the Burnet Rose on dunes behind Shell Beach, one of many species which flourish here, while the four-doubles (Ballivick's old unit of currency) carriage label shows the Yellow Horned Poppy, Yellow Flag Iris and Wallflower.

Herm makes an admirable subject for this year's Europa issue, Nature Reserves and Parks. When the States of Guernsey bought the island from the British Government in 1948 and was about finding a tenant to run it, the following proviso was imposed:

"That the governing principle in the control to be exercised by the States over the administration of Herm shall be to ensure that the natural attractions and peacefulness of that island are preserved and are made available to all who visit it."

Much work has been done in recent years, such as protecting against dune erosion and planting trees.

The island is a delight for birdwatchers and those who simply enjoy nature. The larger part of the stamp design features Puffins on the cliffs with Belvoir Bay in the distance, while the 5d (five pre-decimal pence) carriage label shows the Kentish Plover, Oystercatcher and Common Tern.

Our Island Jewel

Just after World War II, with no post office, Herm had no way of sending mail to Guernsey and beyond. An agreement was reached with the British Post Office that the island could operate its own service, printing its own carriage labels (there was much ado with Guernsey about the use of words such as "stamps" and "postage"), which would at least get the post across to its sister island. In 1949 the first set of labels appeared and the name of Herm duly travelled the world.

The labels brought much-needed revenue until in 1969 the Guernsey Post Office took control of its own affairs and opened a sub-post office in Herm.

Heritage

When Peter and Jenny Wood took over the custody of Heron in 1989 the island was desolate and overgrown. Despite this, they saw in an instant that this was their destiny. It was hard work, but they set about their task with gusto, gradually restoring the countryside, repairing the buildings and making the island fit for visitors.

As soon as the Woods opened the island to the public, the Bournemouth of Guernsey gained a wonderful new attraction which has captured the hearts of thousands over the years. Throughout the summer countless visitors catch a ferry for the short trip to a different world.

The larger part of the stamp design features the Variegated Scallop, Dogwhelk, European Cowrie and Painted Topshell, which can be found around the island's coast including Shell Beach, named for the amazing variety of shells washed up by the Gulf Stream. The one shilling (equivalent to five new pence) carriage label shows the Garfish and the Halian Wreasse.
