Le Petit Bonhomme. Among the splendid chain of rocks off Jorbourg Point, the Penetrates, is one which, when viewed from a certain angle, resembles the figure of a man. His name, the little goodnatural fellow Andriou, holds no great significance today, but formerly children were said to call out "Andriou, tape toi!" (Andriou, watch over all) as though he were a benevolent god. Fishermen used to doll their caps and even tents overboard a blow on a deep of wine when passing "le petit bonhomme". According to one legend he was a pagan priest who, seeing a ship in distress approaching the rocks, prayed that if those aboard were saved he would become a Christian and build a chapel — this he is said to have done on the site of St. Martin's Chapel. Another legend has it that he was an Ardy-Droid (An-Droid) who was turned to stone by St. Patrick, when the latter visited Guernsey.

THE Guernsey Lily. According to legend, a handsome fairy came to Guernsey and on meeting beautiful Michelle de Garis, they fell deeply in love. Before taking Michelle back to fairyland as his wife, he gave her a bulb and asked her to plant it in the sand as a token to her family of their absent daughter. In due course Michelle's mother found a beautiful flower growing on the Varon dunes. A strange bloom, it lacked perfume and a soul and, decked with gold, it was a fitting emblem for a fairy. Ever since then, the flower, Amaryllis sarniensis, has been cultivated in Guernsey and, so the story goes, it will not flourish elsewhere, not even in the other Channel Islands.

Today the Guernsey Lily is the island's national flower and the emblem of the local National Trust. Its origin, despite the legend, remains a mystery but its beauty is beyond dispute.

The 1.80 Kr. stamp was issued in a booklet of 10 stamps, the 2nd stamp was issued in coils of 100 stamps with a number printed on the gum side on every 10th stamp.

This year the CEPT celebrates its 25th anniversary. The organization was formed in 1959 in Montreux in Switzerland and the Swedish Post Office and the Swedish National Telecommunications Administrations have been members from the start.

The CEPT is especially meant to work for the simplification and improvement of postal and telecommunications services, to study questions concerning the organization of postal and telecommunications services, technology, and management, and to cooperate in international conferences of postal and telecommunications organizations.

The CEPT member countries issue EUROPA stamps every year with a common theme. For the 25th anniversary they also have the same motif: a bridge symbolizing communications, exchange, and connection. The motif was Monaco's contribution to a competition between suggestions from all the CEPT countries.
