Дымковская игрушка — одна из русских народных глиняных игрушек. Фигурки лепят по частям, затем просушивают и обжигают, покрывают белилами и расписывают красками жёлтого, синего, зелёного, алого цветов, что придаёт игрушке особую яркость и нарядность. Сюжеты для росписи — женщины, дети, барышни, барыни, кавалеры, мужики с балалайкой, индюшки, всевозможные животные, индейцы, петухи, кони.

Матрёшка — русская деревянная игрушка, в виде расписной куклы, внутри которой находятся подобные ей фигурки меньшего размера. Число вложенных кукол обычно от трёх до пятнадцати. Они имеют форму яйца с плоским донцем и состоят из двух частей: верхней и нижней. По традиции на матрёшке рисуются женщина в сарафане, передничке и платке.

EUROPA STAMP ISSUE: TOYS

Dymkovo toys are one of the old Russian folk art clay handicrafts. The little figures are moulded piece by piece, fastened together and then dried and tempered, whitewashed with chalk diluted in water and painted yellow, blue, green and scarlet, which makes the toys exceptionally vivid and colourful. The motifs include young people, shomokhlas (swallowing sisters and scatterbrains), barynyas (landladies), cavaliers, muzhiki (women with balalaikas), workmen (female water carriers), domestic animals, turkeys, roosters, bears.

The matryoshka doll refers to a Russian wooden toy which is a set of painted dolls of a decreasing size nested inside each other. There are usually three to twelve wooden dolls inside. They are egg-shaped with a flat base and have two halves: the top and the bottom. Traditionally the outer layer is a woman dressed in a sarafan, apron and headscarf.

The private philatelic service company PetersPost Stamps operates from St. Petersburg (Russia) and Helsinki (Finland). The website is www.peterstamps.com

They produce their own stamps under the name «PetersPost». Those stamps are quite similar to Russian stamps and depicts Russian subjects. The head of the former Tsar, Peter the Great is always depicted on the stamps. Those stamps can be legally used on postage sent from Russia to Europe.

On 5 August 2016 they issued a set of 4 stamps using the theme «Europe – Think green».

But those stamps do not use the official Europa logo nor the word “Europa”, but they use the word “Europe” and a very similar design to the common design select by PostEurop for their 2016 Europa stamps. And those stamps are not official Europa stamps.

The stamps have been issued in a souvenir sheet (3 + 1 stamp) and in mini-sheets of 8 stamps.

1.40k. – Maarjamäe Castle – The design of the Maarjamäe summer estate that lies on the eastern coast of the Tallinn Bay was made by Professor Robert Gödicke of the St Petersburg Art Academy, while the building work was directed by Nikolai Thamm, student of the St Petersburg Art Academy, and the building was probably completed in 1874. The most remarkable part of the historic main building is its tower that is pseudo–Gothic in form, quadrangular at the base and octagonal at the top. Above the spectacular portal that vivifies the facade has been fastened the arms of Orlov – Davődovs with the motto, Fortitudine et Constantia.

1.40k. – Keila–Joa Castle (XIX c.) – The design of the Castle of Keila – Joa was made by the Saint Peterburg architect Hans Stackenschneider who later became a court architect and the most important representative of the historical style in Russia. The castle was built next to the Keila River on the right bank, and it was one of the first neo–Gothic style buildings in Estonia. The flat roof two storey building is characterized by lancet arch windows and a tower with a crenelated balustrade in the back corner of the building. The manor house complex has been built in 1833.

The Princess of Nólsoy

(Loosely told by an article in the youth magazine "Ungu Føroyar" no. 3, 1908).

Reportedly, Scotland has had six kings by the name of James. One of them, no one knows which one, was the father of the aforementioned princess.
In those times there were many principalities in the land, each of which with its own king, known as "kinglets". One of these kinglets wanted the princess for his wife - and she wanted him. But King James would not let his daughter marry her beloved, since such an arrangement was below her rank in his opinion.
But the two young people got married anyway, in secret, and then they had to flee the country and go into hiding because King James, mad with rage, wanted to kill the man.
The young couple fled to the Faroes and settled in Korndalur on the small island Nólsoy, just off Tórshavn. At that time Nólsoy had been ravaged by the Black Death and there were no people left on the island.
The ruins of the cottage where the princess and her husband lived, can still be seen. Inside the gate there was a fountain where she collected water. The fountain can still be found and is aptly called the Princess Fountain.
Time passed and they had a little son. The couple, however, lived in perpetual fear that King James would find them. And then one day they saw a large fleet of ships heading for the fjord of Nólsoy. The young people immediately realized that this was King James, who for a long time had been looking for his daughter. The princess knew that her father had come to kill her husband so she asked him to hide up in the outfield, while she met with the King.
She then went with her the child down to "Halgutoftir" on the shore close to Korndalur where the King's ship called into port. When she met the father, she bared her chest and told him that he had kill her and her baby before doing any harm to her husband.
While she spoke, the child started to smile and giggle at the King, stretching its hand for the gold jewellery he wore. This melted his heart and with tears in his eyes he embraced the child. Father and daughter were reconciled and they sent for her husband to come freely, whereupon the King pardoned the young couple. He wanted them to go back with him to Scotland, but they declined this offer and lived for the rest of their lives in Nólsoy.
Another version of this story has it that when King James went ashore in Nólsoy, the first person he saw was his grandson was playing on the seashore. The king immediately recognized the boy and the anger left him as he greeted the child.
Later more people settled in Korndalur and the ruins of their houses can still be seen in the landscape.

In the current village in Nólsoy there is a house called "Kongsstova" (the King's room). It is reportedly the first house that was built in the village, and was said to be constructed by the sons of the Scottish princess. There are families in Nólsoy (and in the Shetland Islands) which according to the legend are descendants of the escaped princess and her husband.
Is there any grain of truth to this legend? Well, it certainly makes for a good story - and we the Faroese love a good story more than all the world’s castles and palaces.

100 gr. inside Europe (no face value, 340 Kr.) – Castle in the air
100 gr. outside Europe (no face value, 535 Kr.) – Snow Castle
According to the decision of Postal Operators in Europe castles constitute the common theme of the year. A castle is a fortified structure, usually difficult to reach due to its location. Most castles of medieval Europe were homes to gentry and royal families, built to withstand the onslaught of enemies, as well as being an important status symbol. Many continental castles are still in use, mostly being used as museums but some as residences, even homes of the descendants of the original owners. Castles were never built in Iceland, with the exception of castles in the air and snow castles, which are the theme of the Icelandic Europa stamps. Throughout Icelandic nature, however, castle forms can be seen. In the famous poem “Skjaldbreiður“ Jonas Hallgrímsson says: “Made of blue solidified lava / these are castles of rock for the freeborn.” This castle metaphor refers to shapes that can be seen in nature. The landscape becomes a visible construction which speaks to the eyes. Icelandic nature can take on diverse forms which might be called natural Icelandic “castles”. These include, for example, Dimmuborgir lava fields in Myvatn, Eldborg (Fire City) in Mýrar and the Citadel in Húnavatnssysla.

EUROPA 2018 - 'Bridges'

European postal administrators have issued philatelic stamps depicting 'Bridges' as the common theme for EUROPA 2018.

Malta's two-stamp issue feature the Madliena Bridge and the Grand Harbour breakwater bridge.

Grand Harbour Breakwater Bridge

This bridge, also known as St. Elmo Bridge was built during the British period as part of the breakwater project. It was completed in 1910, having taking 7 years and 500 men to finish. It was intended as protection of the Grand Harbour from intruders. Traditionally the Grand Harbour was protected by a heavy chain barrier, which ran across the entrance from Fort St. Elmo to Fort Ricasoli. This bridge gave access to the breakwater, however it was destroyed by enemy action during World War II.

A 'replica' bridge was inaugurated in 2011 and this was part of the plan to regenerate Valletta's Grand Harbour. The bridge was redesigned and modelled on the destroyed Victorian bridge while still keeping some of its features.

Madliena Bridge

The Madliena or Wied Il-Ghira Bridge was built in 1888 by the British military forces to facilitate transportation of military equipment and also servicemen along the Victoria Lines. Until the 1930s soldiers would reach nearby Fort Madliena via the bridge when on duty to guard that part of the Victoria Lines. Later this bridge came into use by civilians and is still a popular thoroughfare for Gharghur or Naxxar.

EUROPA stamps are issued by European postal administrations and bear the official EUROPA logo.

Since the first issue in 1956, EUROPA stamps have been a tangible symbol of Europe's aim for closer integration and cooperation. These stamps underline cooperation between European postal administrations and seek to promote philately. They also build awareness of the common goals, roots, culture and history of Europe.
